

Are you part of a Naval Family?

We are looking for Naval children aged between 11-21 years to take part in short virtual focus groups.

The Veterans and Families Institute (VFI) at Anglia Ruskin University are looking for Naval children to take part in a research project focused on communication between children, partners and serving parents during separation, looking from traditional communication methods (i.e., emails, phone calls and letters) to the use of internet-based technologies (i.e., FaceTime, Skype, Instant messaging and social media). This research is funded by the Naval Children's Charity and will help them and other organisations to better support military families during separation.

If you'd like to take part or would like more information, please talk to your parents and ask them to get in touch with Leanne Gray (leanne.gray@aru.ac.uk) or Abigail Wood (abigail.wood@aru.ac.uk). You will be gifted an amazon voucher for your time.

This research is funded by the Naval Children's Charity and will help them and other organisations to better support military families during separation.

